Only those who understand IP will be able to take charge of the future of their organisations and their own careers. The development of the global economy is powered by intellectual property. The knowledge of how to maximise intellectual capital in your business is vital not only to succeed but also to survive in the modern marketplace. Merely knowing names such as copyright, trademarks, and patents is not enough - you must master intellectual property knowledge to ensure success. The worldwide demand for professionals who understand the law relating to intellectual property is unprecedented; the MIPL programme provides graduates from all streams the opportunity to become thought leaders of this new economy.

The Master's in Intellectual Property law from the IGNOU – School of Law, developed in partnership with the Queensland University of Technology, Australia provides in-depth training in intellectual property law. The programme covers:

- A introduction to various forms of IP,
- In-depth analysis and study of each form of IP,
- The law relating to IP, and
- Issues relating to the commercialisation of IP.

This two-year Master's programme is delivered completely online, and is expertly designed for –

- Legal professionals
- Non-legal professionals and technical personnel, and
- Academics

who aspire to acquire the skills and knowledge required to be instrumental in promoting growth in an increasingly knowledge-driven society.

The curriculum has been designed by an Expert Committee, constituted of leading academicians from the IGNOU–School of Law panel and others such as Professor Kamal Puri from the QUT, who have established international reputations in the field.

If you are working in any industry that utilises IP, and wish to ensure the success of your organisation or the advancement of your career, the MIPL programme is tailor-made for you!

The MIPL programme is delivered completely online, using Rainmaker's proprietary eMentor Learning Management System. This allows candidates to access study materials and a multitude of interactive, engaging learning resources anytime, and from anywhere!

Law graduates also have the option to obtain a dual certification by studying at the QUT in Australia. More details are available from: mylawU@rainmaker.co.in
