These encompass non-verbal as well as verbal means of communication. Gestures, facial expressions, the spoken word are some examples of these

			Bhavan, New Delhi		types of communication methods. A language learnt in childhood in the home environment, i.e., mother tongue poses very few challenges, if at all any, in speaking, listening, writing and reading. The ability to use the language is automatic. But what happens if the language is other than the native language? If it is a complete foreign tongue? How can a learner of a foreign language deduce the meaning of new words while reading a text? Are there ways and means or strategies to make reading of texts in a foreign language easy, effective and self enabling? The answer is: Yes. International words, similar words, reference to context, titles and pictures are some of the ways and means which can make text comprehension easy, fast and suitable for self learning mode. And there are many, many more such strategies. But more about them in the Gyanvani session on 18.01.2018.
